

Develop your teams for QSIR and excellent Patient Centred Care

Skills Training UK is committed to helping our NHS employer clients understand and use the opportunity of the Apprenticeship Levy to develop and deliver training which fits with their plans for Quality, Service Improvement and Redesign (QSIR) and Patient Centred Care.

From Continuous Quality Improvement to Leadership and Management, we work in partnership to help NHS Trusts with co-branded, bespoke Apprenticeships programmes.

We have teams of passionate, expert trainers ready to equip your staff with the skills and knowledge to progress in their roles and support your Trust's ambitions.

Apprenticeships training is structured and appropriately tailored to be directly relevant to each staff member's role and career pathway.

We support each individual and empower staff with the confidence to apply their newly acquired skills and knowledge into their NHS daily work, enhancing individual and team motivation and performance.

Please get in touch to discuss our experience and tailored approach for Acute Care, Mental Health Trusts, Specialist Care such as Cancer Units, Ambulance Trusts and CCGs.

“Staff are at the heart of our culture, and the Apprenticeship Levy has allowed us to provide them with more opportunities to learn and develop within their role so that they can continue to provide excellent care to our patients.”

Kay Gilman, Learning and Development Manager

“I’ve worked for the NHS for 36 years and have previously run projects with enthusiasm and passion. The training provided the systems, tools and procedures so that I can bring structure to that enthusiasm. Staff are now measuring the increased amount of therapeutic activity against incidents and falls, which is expected to decrease as a result of the project.”

Carol Rogers, Occupational Therapist
